For at least the last nine months or so, Dan has been totally absent from Reliable Heating & Air. For at least a year prior to that, he was in and out of the office. He did not work regular 8-5 hours, he would come in at varying times and stay after the rest of us had left. When he was here, he seemed very negative about the way we did things. Nothing was really any different from when he worked full time but it seemed like he was indirectly accusing us of failing at running the office. He would constantly question how things were done.

Besides being argumentative, sometimes when Dan was here he and Barbara would have fights. They would scream at each other in front of us or in a back office. On one occasion they were fighting in the parking lot and she was thrown to the ground. Another time, Barbara was gone and Dan went to her desk (he would often look through the things on her desk while she was gone). He took some shredded paper from her desk and shoved it down in a plant, getting water everywhere. He also crushed chocolate candies all over her desk and phone.

While I was pregnant, Dan would comment on how my breasts were getting larger. He would tell another girl in the office that she was gaining weight. He was always very outspoken, whether it was appropriate or not.
